The quarterly meeting of the Baptist Young People's Union of Richmond and Manchester held at the Second Baptist church Sunday afternoon was one of the best in the history of the city union. Christians Should Hold Offices, Christians Should Hold Offices.

"Joel's Vision of Spiritual and Material Prosperity in the Last Days" was the subject of Rev. Mr. Beauchamp's sermon at St. James Methodist church Sunday night. It was the second discourse it the series on "Messages From the Minor Prophets," and it is not too much to say that Mr. Beauchamp has not preached a finer sermon since his pastorate in this city. He referred to the hist days as beginning with the outpouring of God's Spirit at the Pentecost, when Peter declared the fulfilment of part of Joel's prophecy. As to the last day, or the millennium, the speaker said he knew nothing, neither did anybody clse. What concerns the Christians of the present day is the advent of individual, social, and civic righteousness, such as Joel forcesses, "that "said the preacher," I am day is the advent of individual, social, and civic righteousness, such as Joel forersw, "but," said the preacher, "I am ashamed to say that professing Christians are doing much to retard instead of hastening, the coming of such a condition of things. Members of the church lack the moral coatage to testify of Christ in the social and business relations of life." The wickedness of some of the larger cities, in which the church people could, if they would, control affairs, was cited as proof of the negligence of Christians. Our beautiful city of Richmona, with gence of Christians.

Our beautiful city of Richmona, with its 25,000 or 20,000 church member2, is no exception to the general civic corruption and social degradation. Think of our city to-night, with its gambing houses, its Sabbath amusements, its corruption in city politics, and many other evils, the responsibility for which rosts upon those professing to be followers of the Nazarene. The best leaders are men and women who live closest to Christ. As for me, I stand first for Christ, and pone but reputable and pure men receive my vote, no matter to which party they belong. None but pronounced Christians should fill the offices. This is my political creed. Permanent prosperity for any people is conditioned upon individual, social and civic righteousness—a type of the Kingdom of God. No matter what other people may say, I believe that it is only through such righteousness—as I have referred to that class troubles and all other antagonistic brois can be satisfactorily settled. I repeat that the safest leaders are those who live closest to Christ.

TO-DAY THE GREAT FOURTH.

How It Will Be Celebrated by Rich mond Folks-Everybody to "Go." This is the great "Fourth of July," which, like Christmas, comes but once a year, and on that account everybody takes advantage of it and works himself up to the point of thinking he is having a good time.

In the North the celebration takes the form of setting the torch to fireworks and giving the doctors something to do in the way of tying up lacerated arms and legs and picking out fire-cracker powder from the faces of patriotic but overventuresome juveniles. In Richmond it is different. Here it is a day when everybody who can stops work and goes with his family or best girl to some park or summer resort, or else gets him an angling pole and spends the day on the shady side of a pleasant stream fooling the very lives out of the fishes.

Forest-Hill Park, New-Reservoir Park, Lakeside, and the other beautiful places about Richmond will be crowded all day long. Hundreds of families will take their dinners in baskets to these places, and some even their evening meals. Swings will be put up among high branches, and hammocks swung from trunk to trunk, and in these children and old people will all be children again.

To-day all the Federal, State, and city offices will be closed, and the officials will have holiday. The banks and freight depots will also close. To-day, too, the veterans of Pickett Camp will enjoy the Fourth beneath the spreading branches of Chesterfield's mighty oaks at Centralia.

The post-office will observe Sunday hours. There will be no delivery at all, but two collections from the boxes will be taken—one at 8 A. M. and one at 3 P. M.

D. H. McAlpin's Long Fight May He Successfui.

(New York Journal.) After years of sturdy fighting against the Tobacco Trust it begins to look as though D. H. McAlpin were about to win the great struggle of his life.

From Wall Street come more and more persistent rumors of dissension among the friends of the trust, and though the men

While such men as Pierre Lorillard and George D. Finley, Harrison I. Drummond, and David Keller are leaving their desks and getting outside of the ring, McAlpin is flooding the country with enormous advertisements of tobacco and cigarettes, "Not made by a trust." From every highway and byway, from every fence and highway and byway, from every fence and billboard, the "Not made by a trust" sign stares the monopoly men in the face. DREYFUS' FIRST TALK TO HIS WIFE He First Distrusted Her-Refused to Kins Het.

(New York World) RENNES, FRANCE, July 2.—From relatives and friends of Mme. Dreyfus I have obtained details of her interview with her husband yesterday, and can cable what is probably the only accurate ecount of the first meeting. When the cell-door opened for Mme. Dreyfus and her companion, Mme. Havet, a captain of the guard was ordered to witness and hear everything. Mme. Drey fus flew to her husband with a single piercing cry, "Alfred!" She clasped him in her arms.

Dreyfus made no answer; no step for ward. He remained passive in her embrace, looking down on the head of his wife, sobbing against his breast.

There were still between them the barrier of four years of exile and agony such as, perhaps, no other living man has en-

While pushing his wife back gently to look at her face, Dreyfus said: "Well, yes, I am hare. I am not much better than a corpse, but here I am."

A TRAGIC SCENE He then walked away without kissing her. He began to pace up and down the cell, his hands behind his back. He looked at the guard, who was present, and seemed furious at the spying. Surprised by his strange, cold attitude his poor wife stood where she was abandoned, in the middle of the room, absodoned, in the middle of the room, absolutely dumfounded. She clasped her shaking hands. She looked as if her heart was breaking. It was pitiful to see her. The guard, who had withdrawn to a corner of the cell; Madame Havet, and the others, were amazed by the cold, strange attitude of Dreyfus, and almost overcome by the suffering of his wife. The prisoner pased with the precision of prison-cell habit. After a time he sank into a chair.

Mme. Dreyfus threw herself on her knees before him, clasped her arms about his neck imploring him repeatedly;

"Alfred, Alfred, look at me," she re-peated over and over again. "Don't you recognize me? I am Lucie, Lucie-your Dreyfus answered:

THE MAN ALMOST DUMB.

Four years of almost absolute silence caused his life to be little more than a memory to him. He seemed to have forgotten how to utter his thoughts or to realize the necessity of uttering them.

Mme. Dreyfus and Mme. Havet were intensely distressed by the state of his mind. Questions had to be repeated several times. Often he spoke quite beside the question, giving no sign of understanding, as if his thought was far away. Nevertheless, he had very lucid moments. He spoke little, often snappishly. From certain of his statements Aime. Dreyfus and Mme. Havet inferred that he had been poisoned against his family. He accused his relatives of having neglected him.

He has not the faintest conception of what they have done for him, of the treatment him.

He has not the faintest conception of what they have done for him, of the importance his case has acquired, and that the attention of the entire world is fixed upon him.

He declared that he would have been back long ago had his wife taken sufficient interest in him. He utterly falled to realize that before him is a fight for his life. He believed that everybody recognized his innocence, and that the Rennes trial is a mere formality.

Hence he shows much resentment for the severity shown him on ship and in prison, growing defiant at times. When a gendarme informed him that the interview was over at the expiration of an hour and a quarter, he cried:

Monsieur, call me Captain Dreyfus, I am captain again until another lot of fools decree otherwise."

"No better illustration of the absolute indefensibility of trusts can be offered than the fact that the Ohio Republicans Convention, of which Mark Hanna was the manager, was compelled to denounce them. Decision Against Petition to Set Aside Foreclosure Sale.

NEW YORK, July 3 .- Justice Stover, in the Supreme Court, to-day handed down a decision affirming the position interposed by the defendants in an action brought by Joseph Moss, a bondholder in the South Carolina Railway Company, on behalf of himself and a number of other bondholders, against Peter Geddes, representing a majority of the bond-holders of the company, for an accountig, and practically for the setting aside of the sale under foreclosure of the road to the defendants, and the deeds of agree ment with the defendants under which the purchase in foreclosure was carried out. Justice Stover's decision is equiva-ent to a dismissal of the complaint.

The plaintiff alleged that by means of their wealth and influence, the members of the majority bondholders purchased the road for $1,000,000, a price alleged to be altogether inadequate.

Justice Stover found that the allegations were not sustained, and 'hat the 1834, had no ground for action,

The case of the Commonwealth against HIS SLOW RECOGNITION.

The man slowly touched her eyes. His fingers were wetted with tears. He took her head between his hands and then he kissed her several times. Not much was said. Mme, Dreyfus could not see him enough. General Walker had apparently taken offence at a jesting remark made by a witness, and remarked that anybody could be a fool sometimes. Lawyer W. S. Hamilton asked if the General's remark was intended for him, inasmuch as he was amused at what the witness said. Sharp words followed, but quiet was soon restored, and Mr. Price suggested that the work should proceed in order, or an adjournment be taken. General Walker remarked that he was willing to proceed if sober counsel could be had. He said also that this was meant for Mr. Hamilton, and that he was tired of trying to do business with a d-d drunken sot as counsel. Mr. Hamilton called General Walker a d-d llar, whereupon the General drew his revolver and fired, the ball entering Mr. Hamilton's body.
